

Through My Eyes Indigenous Film Festival Hits L.A. in March

TRIBE Project presents: A festival celebrating indi-geniuses from around the world

Through My Eyes will showcase short films created by indigenous minorities from all over the world. The festival aims to redefine the word 'indigenous,' originally meaning "of the land," by embracing the artistic contributions of international native filmmakers. This year features 40 films from over 24 countries. "Our submissions are pushing us to be an activist's film festival," says festival Executive Director Tiger Moon. "In an era marked by intense cultural conflict -- but also a renewed sense of activism -- both at home and abroad, it is more important than ever that we create a space for under-represented artists to express themselves."

The festival will take place in the heart Downtown L.A.'s Arts District at ArtShare LA and Cornerstone Theater Company, March 23rd - 25th. Festivities kick off on Friday evening with a red carpet event and film screening from Native American and Canadian First Nations, with special entertainment from Danza Mexia Cuauhtemoc and Cody Blackbird. Saturday's schedule will feature shorts from all over the world and end with a celebratory party with artists and filmmakers; and Sunday will be a day of panel discussions focusing on indigenous peoples in the entertainment industry. For more information about the event or TRIBE Project, visit <http://www.tribeproject7.com/>. For tickets, visit: Through My Eyes Film Festival 2018 Tickets

TRIBE Project (The Reason I Become Evident!) is a grassroots organization that strives to bridge native and non-native communities in Los Angeles through artistic outreach. The group is a passion project of Native American artist and activist Tiger Moon. Moon says: "As an actress and filmmaker, I have seen the opportunities the film medium provides to heal through storytelling. I see a chance to educate people about my culture in a stimulating, visual way."

Indigenous Art Exhibition sponsored by TRIBE Project and Creatizm

TRIBE Project

tribeproject7@gmail.com

Website: tribeproject7.com